Dry Goods

It will be several days before business will get on its feet again and boon as of yore.

Now is the best period of all the year for farmers to market their products. Prices are as high as they will be, and the climate and roads are favorable to the handling of their various commodities.

for purposes of irrigation. During the past season displays of egetables and fruits raised in the Animas and Dolores valleys were such as to vie with the succulent products of California. Pinetimber of large growth abounds; magnificent water bursts forth from the mountain streams on every side; fish and game are within easy reach; the people are kind, intelligent and thoroughly energetic, and altogether Rico, while abounding in wealth for while several of the companies operating mines owned by them here, pro pose to start large forces of men. Even now with the limited development of the mines the yield of precious metal bearing ore is about ive hundred tons per day, which could be quadrupled within a week by increased operations. The people here are looking for a great boom in this region during the coming spring and those coming here will find one of the most wonderful sections of the wonderland of Colorado.

I write this after an extended tramp through this far famed "San Juan" country, destined to be the richest locality in the state and Rico is its pride.

The Bee and Monopolies. ENGLEWOOD, Coo's Co., Ill., December 26, 1881.

To the Editor of THE BEE: Enclosed please find currency for WEEKLY BEE for year 1882. dence. For further particulars call or I not only continue to find it the best medium of news from Nebraska and the far west, but one of the most able, earnest and agressive HAPPY NEW YEAR to all my advocates for the legislative control of corporations now published. People in this region were surprised to find Nebraska's undisputed champion among the roll of anti-monopoly states, at the late meeting of the national alliance. Knowing well the planting of the seed and the nurturing of its growth, more largely through the influence of THE BEE than through any other influenc, the announcement was no surprise to me.

When I was engaged two years ago, in discussing these questions among the people of Nebraska, the most pige-ors in almost every village and country neighborhood, was something like this

You have no right to control by law the property of these men who have risked their money in the con-struction of useful and necessary highways. Granger laws, and tinkering with railroad management has everywhere been a failure, etc. In addition to this the statement is even now industriously circulated not only in Nebraska, but throughout Illinois and Wisconsin, that the first class mes in these states and Iowa reduced their fares to three cents per mile "as soon as they could afford to, and just when they got ready, and not a min-ute sconer. I wish to put an end, if corsible, to any such atrocious false SILVERWARE, SOLID When, less than two years ago, the leading Illinois roads were maintaining a schedule of rates above, and in pen defiance of the rates prescribed under the Ulinois law, a number of public spirited and determined citi z as laid their plans to bring suits simultaneously in a large number of counties through which the lines ran. gress of the state. Other sections where they had already been beaten, in a large number of cases, with a sinners have devised a new schedule if passenger and freight rates for all
